Design system.

01

Build it like Luna.

One typeface family, one accent color, one quiet neutral scale, and a small set of shapes that repeat everywhere. Everything you need to ship a Luna-branded website, marketing page, or UI surface without asking design. Photography, iconography, and product-specific patterns are covered separately - this is tokens, type, colors, and components only.

Typography.

Two families: D-DIN for display, wordmark, and large numbers; Inter for everything else (body, UI, buttons, labels). D-DIN ships as one weight - use size and tracking, never "bold D-DIN". On Apple devices Inter is substituted automatically for SF Pro.

Primary colors.

03

Three colors do 90% of the work: Midnight for depth, Moonlight for accent, White for space. This trio sets the mood of every Luna surface. If you only remember one rule: Midnight carries Moonlight - the accent almost always sits on or near navy.

DO

Lead with Midnight on dark hero sections; pair with Moonlight as a single accent (rule, link, CTA). Use 60%+ white space on marketing pages. Gradient: `#133465 –> #031632` top-to-bottom for atmospheric heroes.

DON'T

Don't tint the wordmark. Don't introduce new accents. Don't flood large areas with Moonlight - it's an accent, not a field. Don't put Moonlight text on white below 14px (contrast fails WCAG AA).

The quiet supporting cast - UI chrome, hairlines, disabled states, chart axes, secondary text. Never a brand color, never a hero field. If a surface reads busy, remove a secondary before adding one.

Status colors. Each one means exactly one thing. On marketing you'll mostly use Success (form confirmations) and Critical (errors). Warning and Info are product-facing. Show one alert at a time - stacking alerts reads as a broken state.

RULES OF THUMB

Status color is the strongest signal on a screen - everything else yields. Pair the fill with its paired ink (never fill+random-ink). Include a label word ("Error") alongside the color so colorblind users aren't left guessing.

DON'T

Don't use alert colors decoratively - they belong to status. Don't stack more than one alert. Don't use red - Critical is plum (#8E3655) to read as serious without feeling alarming. Don't promote an error to a popup unless it blocks the user.

06 / 08 FOUNDATIONS

Space, shape, depth.

06

The rhythm of the system. All spacing is 8pt-based (with a 4pt half-step for tight places). Radii are shape, not decoration - a pill button means "action", a 16px card means "container". Shadows are restrained: never layered, always purposeful.

SPACING RULE OF THUMB

16 is default. 8 when things are related. 24+ when they're separate. 40+ between sections. Consistency beats cleverness - if in doubt, pick 16.

SHAPE LANGUAGE

Round corners say "approachable" - match radius to scale: small elements get small radii, cards get 16, heroes get 24. Pills are for actions only; use 8px radius for inputs, never pill.

07 / 08 COMPONENTS

Buttons & inputs.

Three button styles, one input style. That's it. Primary for the one most important action on a screen, Secondary for the alternative, Ghost for tertiary. Inputs are underline-only on marketing, filled on in-product forms.

Badges & cards.

08

Badges classify state or category - always a word, always a dot. Cards are the default container for anything grouped. One radius (16px), one shadow (card), generous padding. A card with too much in it should become two cards, not a denser one.

BADGES

STATUS · 999PX PILL · 6PX DOT

Fills	Use soft alert fills (Success / Warning / Critical) for status; Periwinkle Mist for neutral / factual tags; Lunar Lavender for categorical.
Text color	Always the alert's dark ink, not black. On Critical solid (#8E3655) use white.

DO

One idea per card. One action per card. Use the eyebrow to say what kind of thing this is ("Last night", "Upcoming"). Let cards breathe - whitespace inside a card is more important than a border around it.

DON'T

Don't nest cards inside cards. Don't add a border and a shadow. Don't crowd the top-right with badges + menus + timestamps - pick one. Don't use card shadow on dark (navy) surfaces; use a 1px #0f1c40 hairline instead.
